Methods Used to Determine which Students will Receive Emergency Grants and How Much

The CARES Act specifies that funds, by way of direct cash grants, should be used to assist students with "expenses related to the disruption of campus operations due to coronavirus." Some examples of unexpected expenses incurred by students at this time are improved hardware or software at home, access to the internet, or other provisions.

The legislation limits eligibility for CARES Act funds only to students eligible to receive federal financial aid (students eligible to participate in programs under section 484 in Title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965), excluding assistance to Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) and international students. Internal reporting showed that 453 current Spring 2021 MCU students were eligible to receive a portion of the CARES Act funding and thus eligible to receive Emergency Financial Aid Grants to students under Section 18004(a)(1) of the CARES Act. The HEERF III American Rescue Plan expanded eligibility to international and DACA students.

In determining a distribution plan to MCU students for the CARES Act/CRRSAA/HEERF II funding, the university created three student populations based on need to determine the Emergency Financial Aid grant amounts. The first population, FAFSA eligible students with no demonstrated need, consisted of 97 students and received a grant of $500. The second population, students with completed FAFSAs with demonstrated need, consisted of 150 students and received a grant of $750. The third population, Pell-eligible students, consisted of 201 and received a grant of $1250. The University will continue this needs-based approach for the distribution of the HEERF III American Rescue Plan emergency grants, planned for September 2021.

To assist eligible students with emergency funding outside of the distribution plan above, an application was created for students to apply for additional funding based on financial hardships directly related to the COVID pandemic.
